

MISS PERKINS BRIDE OF E. W. FREEMAN

Notable Persons Attend Wedding in Presbyterian Church at Riverdale.

MUSIC IS A FEATURE

Miss Dorothy Perkins, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perkins, was married to Edward W. Freeman yesterday afternoon in the Presbyterian Church, Riverdale, on Hudson, by the Rev. Ira S. Dodd, pastor. The ceremony was witnessed by a limited gathering of relatives and friends in the quiet little edifice almost directly opposite Glyndon, the country home of the bride's parents. It was a simple wedding and the only decorations in the church were southern smilax and clusters of white and yellow chrysanthemums, which were placed about the altar.

The guests were assembling there with a program of organ music, compositions by Wagner predominating, and at the entrance of the bride party the nuptial music from "Lohengrin" was played.

The bride entered the church with her mother. She wore a gown of soft white satin made in simple lines and of walking length, and draped with duchesse lace. Over the skirt, which was gathered in folds of satin and finished with a narrow band of pearls, hung a long, square court train. The bodice of the gown was finished in tulle and pearl embroidery and made with a soft, square collar and long ruffled sleeves.

The bride wore a crown of orange blossoms and a half wreath of orange blossoms and the entire length of the train. She was held in place by a narrow band of pearls worn across the forehead and a half wreath of orange blossoms beneath the collar. She carried a bouquet of white orchids, roses and lilies of the valley.

Miss Dorothy Freeman, sister of the bridegroom, acted as the maid of honor and she was the bride's only attendant. She wore a gown of rose-colored tulle with a narrow band of brown fur, which was a hat of rose-colored tulle faced with black velvet. It was trimmed with pink ribbons and a narrow band of fur. She carried a bouquet of large pink dahlias.

Alexander L. Barbour was best man and the ushers were George W. Perkins, Jr., brother of the bride, P. Cooper Bryce, William L. Lippincott, E. Howard Baker, Richard W. Robbins and Charles Noyes, the last mentioned of Westchester.

As the bride party left the church the familiar Mendelssohn wedding music was played.

For the reception, which followed at Glyndon, guests from New York arrived by special train and were taken from the station to the house in automobiles. The bride party received in the large south living room and with them were Mr. and Mrs. George W. Perkins, parents of the bride, and Mrs. B. Wheelock Freeman, the bridegroom's mother. The bride and groom stood before a huge screen of white and blue campanula plants, these flowers being used entirely in the decoration of the room, where was hung a life size portrait of the bride.

A long suite, including the music and dining rooms and library, was also used for the reception, as well as the verandas, where a buffet luncheon was served. There was dancing in the music room at the north end of the attractive country home of the bride's parents. The decorations in all these rooms were of cut flowers from the gardens and conservatories of Mr. and Mrs. Perkins.

Among the guests were the Governor and Mrs. Whitman, Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Baker, Miss Margaret Baker, the Mayor and Mrs. Mitchell, Col. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt, Archibald Roosevelt, Dr. and Mrs. Richard Derby, Mr. and Mrs. George B.
